Selectmen's Meeting

SHELLFISH

Al Pauline, Shellfish Warden, met with Selectmen to outline plans for the coming year and seek their consent to his budget request. Mr. Pauline said that he suggests that commercial quahogging be allowed in 3 feet depth of water in tidal flats not specifically reserved for family shellfishing. The shellfish warden said that most of these areas now do not contain shellfish in any significant amounts but, if raked to turn the bottom over, shellfish could take hold and make productive areas where they are now fallow. He also suggested that dry digging on exposed flats be prohibited when the temperature is less than 30 degrees because seed exposed in such temperature freeze almost immediately.

Mr. Pauline discussed plans to continue propagation efforts through the purchase of quahogs for planting and the transplanting of oysters. He said that the harvest always exceeds the planting. $4,800 of the $12,939.04 budget is earmarked for propagation, up $800 over the previous budget.

State of The Union ?

Editorial, D. C. J.

At least President Carter's State of the Union message was a departure from the deadly dull recitations of all the "successful" achievements of legislation during the previous 3 years. Having little to report on that subject he got right into the exciting news from abroad and stayed there. It was a series of revelations similar to "Hang on tight, your successful drift in a barrel down the rapids is over. The falls are just ahead!"

The rapids leave the United States a little dizzy. It seems the Russians can't be trusted completely. They tend to invade small countries next to the oil fields in the Middle East. However, the administration still hopes for the successful conclusion of the Salt II Treaty. However, the Carter administration must beef up our military strength and perhaps reinstate the draft. In the meantime, we will punish the Russians with non-participation in the Summer Olympics.

Speaking of punishment, President Carter promises Iran that if they hurt our hostages punishment will be sure. What a departure for a country with mottos like "Live Free or Die" and "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death". It once might have been considered that 3 months of solitary confinement after capture in a United States Embassy might be harm to a U.S. citizen.

President Carter has severe problems, most of them self-imposed by inaction, and his countenance shows the strain. His policies, Democrat policies, have born bitter fruit. His detente with the Communists and concessions to them have been many and they have taken advantage of all and now seek more. He gave them the Panama Canal and announced at the time that this was a major victory of his administration. Yet, he did not point to this in pride in the State of the Union address. He told the Russians that their troops were unacceptable in Cuba. Then he decided they were insignificant. Yet, he never mentioned this in the State of the Union message. The domestic part of this State of the Union was hardly worth a mention except a call for sacrifice on the part of all of us. Inflation, energy shortage, all of the great challenges of candidate Carter such as reorganization of government are now not worthy of notice.

The American people love the underdog. But, however much compassion we have for President Jimmy Carter amid the ruins of his hopes and promises, perhaps we may be excused for the thought that the State of the Union might be a lot sounder if a firmer and more practical hand were at the helm at the conclusion of the President's one term.

On Friday, January 18, James Bilodeau, Karen Gracia, Julie Holden, and Miss McQuillan from Mattapoisett went to Boston's Freedom Trail. We went to learn more about Paul Revere and the time in which he lived. Our first stop was the Old North Church, where we met Mr. Mostone, who takes care of the church. He gave us many interesting facts. Then we went to Copp's Hill Graveyard, where we noticed that some of the gravestones were so close together that they were back to back. We saw gravestones of descendants of Robert Newman (who lit the two lights as a signal) and Paul Revere.

After that we went to Paul Revere's house, where two ladies shared many interesting facts with us. Our last two stops were the Old State House and Faneuil Hall. We plan to put together a slide presentation from pictures we took to share with the other fifth graders.

In this issue of Presto Press we have our ad for Minibus trips for Seniors for the month of February. Please clip it out and keep for reference. You will note that two trips are scheduled for the Kennedy Library (February 7 and February 21). This is to allow more Seniors to go. Please do not ask to go on both trips. If both trips are filled, and more want to go, we will schedule further trips.

The Flower Show at the Commonwealth Pier in Boston is scheduled for March 15-23. If we plan a trip, it will require a big bus, as we have to have 10 or more going, and must get our tickets ahead of time in February in order to get them at 1/2 price. We probably will have to ask Seniors to contribute to the cost of the bus, as our budget has been cut Association four years ago. It was their dream that our community would be able to supply their friends, neighbors, and loved ones with blood in a time of need. Thus, they have developed "total needs" program for our community. With a total needs program a patient will never be asked to replace blood or pay a replacement fee. We, the community, have donated our blood to replenish the supply of blood in a unique way of "recycling life". The association has grown in numbers due to the efforts of many church and civic organizations. Our plea is for donors, for neighbors to help neighbors.

With the Red Cross as a collecting, processing, and distributing agency, the members of the blood committee are working together towards a successful blood drive on February 9th at the Mattapoisett Congregational Church. The process of donating blood begins with registering as a donor, then a brief medical history is taken, blood pressure, pulse, and hemoglobin, a measurement of iron content are determined. The screening is done in order to determine who can donate a pint of blood without adverse effects to themselves or to the recipients.

Next, one pint of blood is taken from the donor. After donating, the donor is taken to the canteen where he rests and drinks liquids in order to replace the fluids that have been lost. The pint of blood is then sent to the laboratory for testing.

The laboratory must test or process each unit of blood to ensure that it is safe to use. The first tests done on each unit of blood is the ABO and RH typing and syphilis. Hepatitis is one of the most highly transmittable diseases by blood transfusion; therefore all donors must also be tested for Hepatitis B. The testing method used is Radio Immune Assay, the most sensitive test for hepatitis available. If a donor has a positive hepatitis test the donor's blood and any blood products made from it must be destroyed. A sample of the donor's blood is then sent to National Headquarters for confirmatory testing and then a letter is sent to the donor stipulating that he can never donate again.

Only after all the tests are completed can a unit of blood be labeled. It is labeled with the ABO and Rh type and the statement that the syphilis and hepatitis tests are negative.

Many times, while the testing is being done, the unit of blood itself is separated into its cellular and liquid components. These components may be used to treat specific disorders and illnesses. This treatment, which is becoming more and more prevalent, is called Blood Component Therapy. Specific blood components therapy conserves a valuable human resource in that one donated unit of blood may be made to serve as many as five patients.

For instance, a triple pack of blood can be made into packed red cells, used in the treatment of anemia, platelets for correction of bleeding disorders and plasma. The plasma is then used for the preparation of other products. The plasma can be fractionated into such products as serum albumin, plasma protein fraction, gamma globulin, antihemophilic factor or it can be fast frozen for a product called fresh frozen plasma. A triple pack can also be

The members of the blood committee under the chairmanship of Laura Horne of M.E.C.A. have accepted the responsibilities of various facets of running a successful bloodmobile; Jane Welch of the Mattapoisett Senior Citizens is heading a group of approximately twenty telephone recruiters who are calling previous donors; Nancy Roderigues of Leisure Shores is responsible for scheduling all of the appointments. Appointments are made to insure that the correct number of Red Cross nurses are sent to staff the bloodmobile; Mary Betts, representing the Woman's Club and the Couples' Club, is organizing the volunteers to work the day of the bloodmobile. These volunteers will be registering donors, taking their temperature and assisting the nurses and the donors at their beds. They will also be serving refreshments at the canteen and babysitting for those children attending the bloodmobile with their parents; Searl Root of M.E.C.A.

SHIPBUILDERS OF MATTAPOISETT

By Charles S. Mendell, Jr.

It is said that on one occasion a farmer on the Neck had run up quite a bill for rum at the County House, and Uncle Leonard had his weather eye out for some means of collecting. The farmer had a very large hog; but there was a law that if a man possessed only one pig, it could not be attached for debt. So Uncle Leonard bided his time until his sow had a litter. Then he gave the runt to the farmer and drove pell-mell over to the Neck and took the hog for debt.

Besides running the shipyard, the County House, an extensive salt works on the Neck, a coastwise trade to Charleston, Savannah, and New Orleans, Uncle Leonard was a Government Lighthouse contractor. He built the lights at Mattapoisett and Gay Head, and in 1838 he sailed from Mattapoisett with two ships and a large crew of men to construct two lighthouses on the Gulf of Mexico. It is related that Uncle Leonard did not finish the Mattapoisett light within the specified time, and when the Government Inspector arrived, Uncle Leonard sent a man posthaste to lay some planks on barrels to give the impression that the floor was completed. After a friendly glass of rum, Uncle Leonard drove the Inspector down to view the job; but unfortunately the failed; and then the yard was run by Eliakim Cannon until he failed in 1827. It is said that in this yard the bowsprits of the ships on the stocks hung far out over the street, so if you had arrived in Mattapoisett 115 years ago in the New Bedford and Plymouth Stage Coach, you would have ridden under the overhanging rigging as you jounced up to the Mattapoisett House across the street.

At the foot of Mechanic Street, on the present Hinsdale property, was the famous Meigs shipyard. Joseph Meigs, Esq. was a prominent Citizen, State Senator, prosperous shipping merchant, and successful shipbuilder. He built and ran an old fashioned country tavern and store in what is now the Bay View Hotel. The tavern business must have been thriving, for it is said that Squire Meigs stood on a hill and every farm he could see was mortgaged for rum. In his early days he was Commission Merchant for the Rotches, Howlands, and Rodmans of New Bedford, handling their trade in Naval Stores, Lumber, Sugar, Molasses, and Cotton in Savannah, Charleston, and New York. Of Squire Meigs' two sons, Joseph Jr. was by far the smarter, and his tragic death in his early thirties when he had just taken over the shipyard, broke the old man's spirit and he passed away a few years later, in 1846. The other son, Loring, carried on the business until he was ruined by the panic of 1857.
